CANDIDATES AND CABINETS

The Cox special makes its way eastward over a roadbed checked with questions propounded from town to town by the governor's opponents. To the Cox vision every audience must assume the shape of a great interrogation point. The middle west evidently wants to know. The governor is doing his best to satisfy its inquisitiveness.

At Omaha the cabinet question made its appearance. How much of the Wilson cabinet, if any, will Gov. Cox retain if it falls to him to select the next official family?

The governor did not answer the question categorically. Instead, he made it plain that if there is to be a Cox cabinet it will be chosen as other cabinets have been chosen—after and not before election. Further, the governor makes it plain that he will not enter into a discussion of the personnel or the policies of the Wilson cabinet. Whatever sins the present cabinet may have to answer for the governor at least refuses to be responsible for them. The Wilson circle of official advisers is in no sense an issue now.

It was suggested early in the campaign that Senator Harding should announce before the election the names of those he proposed to invite into his cabinet, if elected. The candidate was supposed to look with favor on the plan. All thought of such a procedure has now been dropped, however. Neither democrat, nor republican will make any such announcement. We shall vote in November for president, but not for a president's cabinet.

Harry L. Davis, speaking at Akron a few days ago, demanded that Gov. Cox tell the public whether "he intends to return the present cabinet or any of its members." This, like the Omaha question, is merely an attempt to play to the galleries. If the hecklers of the governor could switch popular attention from the real issues of the fight to some such blind-siding question as the personnel of the next cabinet, it might serve their partisan purpose, but it would accomplish nothing else. It has not been the custom of newly elected presidents to retain the cabinets of their predecessor even where the relations between the two have been most cordial. The very nature of the cabinet as a government agency precludes the possibility of its being done.

Supporters of Gov. Cox have faith that he will, if elected, choose a cabinet in whom the public has confidence; otherwise they would not support him. The same is true of those who will vote for Senator Harding. Trying to get either candidate to name his cabinet before the election is an effort merely to impress the unthinking—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

COUNTY CLERK'S REPORT
During the first year under prohibition, the work of the coroner was cut by almost half, the report of the clerk of courts for the year ending June 30, 1920 shows.

During the 12 months the coroner investigated 714 cases as compared with 1,375 the preceding 12 months. The number of deaths due to intemperance was nine: the year before it was 50.

Murders during the last year numbered 36: the year before there were 32 murders; 42 suicides last year, 18 the year before; 280 accidents last year, 119 the year before; 254 deaths due to unknown or natural causes last year; 1,209 the year before.

Naturalization business more than doubled, due to the interruption of citizenship hearings for Austrians during the war. During the period ending June 30, 318 persons were naturalized, while 156 were given citizenship papers during the preceding year. Austria with 96 and Italy with 90 led the list this year: England with 40 and Italy with 40 were at the top the year before.

The money value of judgments in common pleas court was more than twice as great as during the preceding year, $1,331,110.92 last year and $631,606.12 the year before. The number of judgments given last year was 1,992; the year before, 1,379. The number of final decrees was 649 as compared with 496 the preceding year.

During the year, 2,269 cases were disposed of in common pleas court: the year before, 1,687. The number of cases taken to the court of appeals was 65, as compared with 73 the year before. The court of appeals disposed of 15 cases this year and 48 the year before. Two cases were taken to the supreme court each year.

Grand jury fees last year were $1,313.10; the year before they were $1,231.10. Fees for petit jurors were $19,485.50; the preceding year they were $25,691.95.

Fines assessed during the year were $21,185, of which $10,425 was collected; the year before, fines assessed amounted to $12,200, of which $7,474 was collected. Forfeited bonds amounted to $1,100; the year before $960.

The business of the criminal branch of common pleas court, like the coroner's work, showed a sharp decline. Of the 410 cases on the docket during the war, as compared with 509 the year before, 194 resulted in convictions or pleas of guilty and 5 in acquittals, while 54 cases were nolle prossed, leaving 147 pending on July 1. During the preceding 12 months, 276 were convicted or pleaded guilty, 33 were acquitted and 72 cases were nolle prossed, leaving 146 cases pending at the end of the year.

WIRE TIGHTENER ON CORNER POST

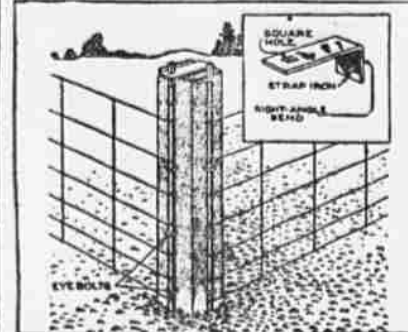

Strands Are Seldom Stretched Tight Enough to Remain for Any Great Period.

TASK PERFORMED ANY TIME

Fence Can Be Kept Taut and Adds to Neat Appearance of Farm—Eye-bolts Are Inserted in Forms Before Concrete Is Poured.

A woven-wire fence is seldom stretched tightly enough to remain taut, and if it becomes slack, it is not only something of a reproach to the owner, but rather difficult to stretch again. An easily made tightener, attached to the corner posts, makes it possible to tighten the fence at any time.

The post forms are set up on the spot, and four eyebolts are inserted in each of the outer sides, before the concrete is poured. After the concrete has set, the forms are removed, leaving the eyes protruding about one inch. Two pieces of iron rod, or pipe, of the proper length, are obtained and the upper ends squared off, as shown. If pipe is used, the upper end should be plugged with a piece of iron rod, held in place by a rivet or pin. Holes are drilled in each piece to correspond with the fence wires. The rods, or pipes, are inserted into the eyebolts and the fence wires put through the holes and bent over. A wrench is applied to the squared end of the pipe, and the fence is drawn up as tightly as desired; one of the right-angle wrenches, or holders, shown in the insert, is then applied, to prevent the wire from unwrapping. These right-angle wrenches are made of heavy strap iron, long enough to fit over the post, as shown, and with a square hole at one end to fit over the rod. The square hole is made by heating the Iron, and cutting the hole with a chisel, or a square punch. A separate wrench, or holder, is required for each tightener.—Dale R. Van Horn, Lincoln, Neb., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

IMPROVE QUALITY OF SILAGE

Feed May Be Materially Bettered by Using Care in Taking It Out—Keep Surface Level.

The quality of the silage may be materially bettered by using care in taking it out. Don't put the fork down five or six inches deep, as though you were pitching manure, but use a fork with tines close together and skim off the top, only loosening what you need for the day's feeding. Keep the surface level and perhaps a little lower near the outer wall.

SEASON FOR MITES AT HAND

If Hens Are Dropping Off in Egg Production It Would Be Good Plan to Look for Pests.

The mite season is now at its height, and if one's hens are dropping off in production faster than they really should and if the young stock are not growing as well as they ought to, it would be well to carefully inspect their sleeping quarters for red mites. The red mites hide during the daytime in the cracks and crevices under the roosts, or at either end where they are held up; they may also be found in the nests or in the cracks on the sides of the building. To eliminate, spray or paint with kerosene and crude carbolic acid, or, better still, use carbollinum.

INBREEDING IS NOT FAVORED

Experiments in Hands of Amateur Are Usually Expensive—Many Animals Discarded.

Inbreeding experiments are generally expensive, especially in the hands of the amateur, for as a result of inbreeding the percentage of animals which must be discarded is inevitably increased enormously. However, the animals which stand the test of inbreeding are worth infinitely more than animals of the same quality which have been produced by ordinary breeding. It is by inbreeding or by that dilute form of inbreeding known as linebreeding that the greatest progress is made by our best breeders.

AND, OF, TO, I, A AND IN MOST USED WORDS

Statistician Has Been Counting the Words People Use and Gives Result.

In that clatter of the tongue and scratch of the lead pencil that goes on from the time one is born to the day of his last slow ride, what word of all those in the dictionary, do you suppose, he uses the greatest number of times?

Folks use the word, "the" twice as often as any other. Next to it is "and." Then follow "or" and "to." Since all of us are egotists the little pronoun "I" is the fifth word in use, and occurs one-third oftener than the pronoun, "you." A, in, that, for, it, was, is, will and as appear in order.

In eliciting the facts the statistician has disproven the widely accepted theory that he is a dull and tedious individual who may be depended upon to select for his enumerators some obscure and technical subject in which the average run of men and women are not interested. Here is one man of tables and averages who is human. He was, during the war, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, attached to the office of the chief of staff. He is now Mr. Ayres, director of education of the Russell Sage foundation.

At the close of the war Colonel Ayres compiled for the war department a statistical summary which showed at a glance what had happened during those months of conflict.

Now he has been counting the words people use. The ten next most used words are have, not, with, be, you, at, we, on, he, by. They are all little fellows, who, like Peter Pan, never grow up.

The ladies will get by if they take as much interest in a party issue as they do in a party line.

Castor oil isn't a perfect medicine, but it agrees with most people.

Doing Away with Chance in Children's Hosiery

One sure way of holding down the "high cost of living" is to do away with the "chance" and high cost of "haphazard shopping."

For example, take the matter of the children's hosiery. The return of the children to the schoolroom emphasizes the need of new hosiery. Indiscriminate selections on this item, alone, can add considerable to the cost, and more to the uncertainty of service, of the "school outfit."

That is why it is so important to every economical mother to choose from a line of known value and quality, such as
